WELCOME TO METRO PHILLY

SAM NEWHOUSE, REPORTER

Getting from one end of Center City to the other has become a slog, and city officials say the recent downtown boom has been a bust for commuters, pedestrians, bikers and SEPTA riders trapped in an easily-clogged network of narrow streets. The mayor, SEPTA and the PPA pledged a new crackdown while Council President Darrell Clarke proposed hiring new "public safety officers" to help with this and other quality-of-life issues. KIM WANTS ANOTHER TRUMP SUMMIT: S. KOREA

1 North Korea's Kim Jong Un wants a second summit with U.S. President Donald Trump soon to hasten denuclearization, but a key goal is declaring an end this year to the 1950-53 Korean War, South Korea's President Moon Jae-in said on Thursday. Moon said he and Kim spent most of a three-day summit discussing how to break an impasse and restart nuclear talks between Pyongyang and Washington, which are at odds over which should come first, denuclearization or ending the war. Kim, who recently proposed another summit with Trump after their unprecedented June talks in Singapore, said the North was willing to "permanently dismantle" key missile facilities in the presence of outside experts, and the Yongbyon main nuclear complex, if the United States took corresponding action. The joint statement from the summit stipulates Kim's commitment to a "verifiable, irreversible dismantlement" of the nuclear programs, and ending the war would be a first U.S. reciprocal step, Moon said, adding, "Chairman Kim expressed his wish to complete denuclearization quickly and focus on economic development."

AMERICAN AIRLINES HIKES BAGGAGE FEES BY $5

2 American Airlines Group Inc. said on Thursday it would raise domestic U.S. baggage fees by $5, joining major rivals in the price hike amid higher fuel costs. The largest U.S. airline said it would hike the price of a first checked bag by $5 to $30 and the second bag to $40 in the first price increase since 2010. Other U.S. airlines, including Delta Airlines Inc., United Continental Holdings Inc. and JetBlue Airways Inc., have also announced price hikes recently. The moves come at a time when Congress is considering whether to require the U.S. Transportation Department to assess if airline baggage and ticket-change fees are "reasonable and proportional." Airlines have cited rising costs as a concern, with high fuel prices and bumps in salaries and benefits for pilots, flight attendants and mechanics pushing up operating expenses. In July, American cut its 2018 earnings forecast for the second time after it reported a 34.5 percent drop in quarterly profit, hurt by higher fuel costs. U.S. airlines' revenues from baggage and reservation-change fees increased from $5.7 billion in 2010 to $7.5 billion in 2017.

SUIT TARGETS STUDENT LOAN DEBT RELIEF FRAUD

4 New York's attorney general on Thursday sued 10 companies and two executives over their alleged roles in a scam to induce thousands of struggling borrowers into buying student loan debt relief services that they could have received for free. Attorney General Barbara Underwood said defendants typically charged more than $1,000 for their services, often imposing usurious interest rates, after luring borrowers with false claims such as being affiliated with the government, or that their help was needed if borrowers wanted relief. Underwood said about $1.34 trillion of federal student loan debt is outstanding, and that the defendants targeted many of the nearly 10 million borrowers who are late on their payments. The defendants include Debt Resolve Inc., a Hawthorne, N.Y.-based company that owns some of the other defendants, and its current and former chief executives, Bruce Bellmare and Stanley Freimuth. Hutton Ventures LLC, which is based in Santa Ana, Calif., and is a business partner of Debt Resolve, and a financing company, Equitable Acceptance Corp of Minnetonka, Minn., are also among the defendants.

'SUGE' PLEADS NO CONTEST TO MANSLAUGHTER

5 Rap mogul Marion "Suge" Knight pleaded no contest in Los Angeles on Thursday to manslaughter, part of a plea agreement with prosecutors that calls for him to serve 28 years in prison. Knight, co-founder of influential hip-hop label Death Row Records, entered the plea ahead of his scheduled trial on murder charges stemming from accusations that he ran down two men with his pickup truck near a burger stand in the Los Angeles suburb of Compton on Jan. 29, 2015. Knight appeared in court to enter the plea wearing an orange jail jumpsuit. He spoke only to answer a series of questions from Los Angeles Superior Court Judge Ronald Cohen. The former music producer is scheduled to be sentenced in October and will be given a 28-year sentence under the term of his plea deal with the Los Angeles County District Attorney's Office. As part of the agreement, murder charges against Knight will be dismissed by prosecutors, along with separate criminal cases charging him with robbery and making criminal threats.

'Multiple fatalities' in Maryland Rite Aid shooting

Officials responded to a shooting at a Rite Aid distribution center in Harford County.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT

The shooter killed three and wounded three before fatally shooting herself.

Several people are confirmed dead following a shooting at a drugstore distribution center on Thursday in Harford County, Md., according to authorities.

"At this time I can confirm multiple wounded and multiple fatalities," Harford County Sheriff Jeff Gahler said at a Thursday press conference.

According to CNN, the shooter killed three people and wounded three others before fatally shooting herself. The shooting occurred at a Rite Aid distribution center.

Gahler said that law enforcement responded to a call at 9:06 a.m. The Harford County Sheriff's Office wrote on Twitter around that time that the "situation is still fluid." Gahler reiterated that message at the noon press conference.

"We are so preliminary into this investigation," he said. "We are going to give you as much information as we can right now even though it's very preliminary and very limited."

Officials believe that the shooter acted alone. The lone suspect died at a nearby hospital.

Agents from the Baltimore offices of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms and Explosives (ATF) and the FBI also responded to the shooting, per the sheriff's office.

"Our prayers are with all those impacted."
Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan on Twitter

The Rite Aid distribution center is in Aberdeen, about 32 miles northeast of Baltimore. The area of the reported shooting includes a church and a business district. It is near the Aberdeen Proving Ground, a large Army facility where military technology is developed and tested, according to Harford County's website.

Maryland Gov. Larry Hogan said on Twitter Thursday morning that his office was "closely monitoring the horrific shooting." He offered state resources to Harford County as it continues to deal with the situation, officials said.

"Our prayers are with all those impacted, including our first responders," Hogan wrote. "The State stands ready to offer any support."

The shooting occurred a day after a man shot and wounded four people, including a police officer, at a Pennsylvania court building before he was killed by police, according to Pennsylvania State Police. On Wednesday, a shooter also injured four people in Middleton, Wis.

Two ideas pitched to soothe Center City congestion: Crackdown and new civilian cops

Worsening traffic congestion in Center City leads to ideas from both mayor and Council.

SAM NEWHOUSE
sam.newhouse@metro.us

Center City has become steadily more crowded in the last several years.

It's not hard to see why. Philly's population is growing for the first time in decades. Taking into account the new troops of millennials employed downtown, Uber and Lyft, bicyclists and new bike lanes, and the bewildering number of people who reject the convenience of public transportation to drive a car into the city — and you get traffic patterns in Center City suddenly moving slower than ever.

Two ideas to address the issue were publicized by city officials on Thursday. First up is a planned crackdown on moving violations — like blocking the box, double-parking, or illegal parking in bus lanes, which can have a cumulative effect backing up traffic for blocks — which will go into effect Monday.

"People need to get to where they are going — to work, to school, to see their loved ones — and not worry about getting stuck in traffic. It's that simple," Mayor Jim Kenney said on Thursday, announcing a crackdown, specifically on Market and Chestnut streets, in collaboration with SEPTA and the Philadelphia Parking Authority (PPA).

Philadelphia has grown by 50,000 residents and jobs since 2010, Kenney's office said, and they asserted that Center City is the second-most-dense downtown in any city in the country, just behind midtown Manhattan.

As part of the crackdown, SEPTA and PPA officials will be stepping up efforts to prevent activities like stopping, standing, loading or driving through an intersection from bus-only and right-turn lanes along Chestnut and Market streets. SEPTA supervisors have already been providing warnings for weeks to drivers violating these rules and negatively influencing traffic patterns. Starting Sept. 24, enforcement will commence, focused on Market between 7th and 13th streets and on Chestnut between 22nd and 10th streets. "Our goal is not to issue tickets, but rather deter if not stop unsafe behavior and eliminate congestion from our streets," PPA Executive Director Scott Petri said in a statement. Meanwhile, also on Thursday, City Council President Darrell Clarke proposed an amendment to create a new class of civil service employee, "Public Safety Officers," to help enforce moving violations throughout Center City year-round.

"No matter how you get around — whether by motor, wheel, or foot — you probably witness at least one traffic violation a day," Clarke said in a statement. "We could have the toughest laws in the country on the books — but what good does it do if we don't have appropriate enforcement? Not only will putting more eyes on the street encourage everyone who moves through our city to follow the rules, I believe it will free up critical police resources that can be directed to more serious crimes."

According to the amendment to the Philadelphia Home Rule Charter Clarke proposed on Thursday, these officers would not carry a gun or be empowered to make any arrests. Their duties would relate to "providing support to the police department to regulate the flow of traffic and support special events; providing such other assistance as uniformed police officers may require to enforce quality of life crimes; enforcing municipal code violations relating to the quality of life in the city's neighborhoods," according to the text of the amendment.

The dueling proposals seem to be yet another example of the occasional disconnect between City Council and the mayor's office, with Kenney implicitly rejecting Clarke's proposal. (The FOP has also criticized the idea, saying only sworn police officers could handle these types of duties.)

Trump releases first two names of US war dead handed over by North Korea

President Donald Trump released the names on Thursday of two Army soldiers killed in the 1950-1953 Korean War whose remains were handed over by North Korea this year in a goodwill gesture.

Trump said the first remains identified by the U.S. military belonged to Army Master Sergeant Charles H. McDaniel, 32, of Vernon, Indiana, and Army Private First Class William H. Jones, 19, of Nash County, North Carolina.

"These HEROES are home, they may Rest In Peace, and hopefully their families can have closure," Trump said in his Twitter post.

North Korea handed over 55 boxes containing the remains of war dead in July, fulfilling a pledge by North Korean leader Kim Jong Un during his June summit with the U.S. president in Singapore.

Headstones are adorned with flags at Arlington National Cemetery GETTY IMAGES

The remains, which were repatriated to Hawaii on Aug. 1, included only one "dog tag," a form of identification in the U.S. military.

The U.S. Defense POW/MIA Accounting Agency (DPAA) said earlier this month it had identified the first two American troops from the boxes of remains, but declined to name them publicly, saying their relatives would be notified first.

On Thursday, the DPAA said it was hoping to speak next month with the North Korean military about resuming field operations inside North Korea to find remains of U.S. service members.

"We have communicated, through the DPRK mission to the U.N., an invitation to sit down with them to negotiate the resumption of field operations inside North Korea that would commence in the spring of 2019," Kelly McKeague, director of the DPAA, told Reuters.

McKeague said North Korea had not yet accepted the invitation.

More than 7,700 U.S. troops remain unaccounted for from the Korean War.

The United States and North Korea worked together on joint field activities to recover remains from 1996 to 2005, until Washington halted operations, expressing concerns about the safety of its personnel.

The Trump administration has hailed the handover of the remains as evidence of the success ofTrump's summit with Kim.

The administration said on Wednesday it was ready to resume talks with North Korea after Pyongyang pledged to dismantle key missile facilities and suggested it would close its main Yongbyon nuclear complex in exchange for unspecified action by Washington. REUTERS

Kavanaugh's accuser willing to testify: Reports

Christine Blasey Ford would agree only to "terms that are fair and which ensure her safety."

A lawyer for the woman accusing Brett Kavanaugh, President Donald Trump's Supreme Court nominee, of sexual assault told a Senate panel the professor would be willing to testify next week if it provides "terms that are fair and which ensure her safety," an email obtained by media on Thursday showed.

Christine Blasey Ford, a psychology professor at Palo Alto University in California, has been given a Friday deadline to decide whether to testify before the Judiciary Committee, but Republican lawmakers and the accuser remained locked in a high-stakes standoff over whether she will appear.

The email from Ford's lawyer, Debra Katz, was reported on by the New York Times, Washington Post and CNN.

GETTY IMAGES

"As you are aware, she's been receiving death threats which have been reported to the FBI and she and her family have been forced out of their home," Katz wrote to the committee staff, according to the Washington Post. "She wishes to testify, provided that we can agree on terms that are fair and which ensure her safety."

"A hearing on Monday is not possible and the committee's insistence that it occur then is arbitrary in any event," according to the email.

Kavanaugh, the conservative federal appeals court judge nominated by Trump in July for the lifetime job as a Supreme Court justice, also has been invited to testify on Monday.

Chuck Grassley, the committee's Republican chairman, on Wednesday sent a letter to Ford's lawyers giving her until 10 a.m. on Friday to submit prepared testimony if she intended to show up on Monday.

A group of about 40 protesters, most of them women, clogged the lobby of Grassley's Senate office on Thursday. Many wore buttons with the words "I believe Dr. Christine Blasey Ford."

They asked to speak to Grassley and were told the senator is in Iowa, according to Marcie Wells of Las Vegas, a member of the Women's March organization that has been outspoken in opposition to Kavanaugh's nomination. REUTERS

Cargill Meat recalls more than 65 tons of ground beef

Cargill Meat has recalled over 130,000 pounds of ground beef due to possible E. coli contamination, affecting nearly a dozen of its products.

According to Wednesday's release by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Food Safety and Inspection Service (FSIS), the products were made from the "chuck portion of the carcass" and may be contaminated with "Escherichia coli O26."

The recall applies to approximately 132,606 pounds of ground beef products from the Fort Morgan, Colorado-based company.

There are 12 products affected by this Cargill beef recall. They all have establishment number "EST. 86R," were produced and packaged on June 21, 2018 and have a "use or freeze by" date of July 11.

FSIS tells consumers who have purchased the ground beef in question to throw it away. FSIS also advises consumers to safely prepare and fully cook their raw meat and to "only consume ground beef that has been cooked to a temperature of 160°F."

GETTY IMAGES

These affected products were flagged after the FSIS was notified on Aug.16 of an investigation regarding E. coli O26 illnesses. This investigation has now identified 17 illnesses and one death related to the potential contamination.

The onset of illness ranged from July 5 to July 25, 2018.

Symptoms include diarrhea (often bloody) and vomiting. Some people may develop severe infection. Kidney failure (with symptoms like easy bruising, pallor and decreased urine) is common with this infection. Kids under 5, older adults and "persons with weakened immune systems," are more at risk, FSIS reports.

People can get sick two to eight days after exposure and most recover within a week. FSIS urges consumers with symptoms to contact a doctor.

Due to this ongoing investigation, there were two resulting actions: a Cargill beef recall and a recall of ground beef products sold by Publix on Aug. 30. In both cases, raw beef products that were made from chuck may have been contaminated with Escherichia coli O26.

FSIS stated: "Traceback information indicated that case-patients consumed ground beef products purchased at various retail stores that were supplied by Cargill Meat Solutions."

Has the cult of celebrity become a snake that eats itself? We've entered an age where we can't remember why we idolize our idols. That is exactly the theme of this Grumble we received from our reader Rachel Garber. Take it away, Rachel!

FAMOUS FOR BEING FAMOUS

I'm sick and tired— and frankly, disgusted — with the relentless promotion of people who are "celebrities" for no other reason than their ability to promote themselves, and with the stupid media that has chosen to make them relevant for no other reason than the headlines they create. It boggled my mind when I discovered how many years "Keeping Up with the Kardashians" has been on TV. Why are they still a thing? And wtf happened to TLC? Once upon a time it was an interesting channel. But in the last number of years it's been the go-to channel for Honey Boo Boo and "Toddlers & Tiaras" (wow, nothing like a channel devoted to promoting the specialization of little girls). I've lost track of the utter trash that is featured on that money-grubbing channel. I'm just disappointed that they've forgotten what TLC stands for. I guess the new meaning is "Learning" how we've found new ways to cash in on viewers' love of trash TV. — Rachel Garber, Metro US reader

Aries Your desire to help others is a good thing, as long as you don't neglect your needs. Don't let anyone take advantage of you. Learn from experience.

Taurus Don't let anger or emotions lead to bad choices. Gather the facts before you jump to conclusions and disrupt your position or reputation. Stability is your strength.

Gemini Plant seeds, but don't oversell your idea. Being straightforward and only promising what you can manage are all that's required. Honesty and integrity will help you avoid criticism and loss.

Cancer Make plans with someone you love, or host an event at your place. Mixing business with pleasure will lead to new opportunities and better relationships with your peers.

Leo Emotions will mount when dealing with sensitive issues. Don't say something that will lead to an unwanted change. Listen to others before you respond.

Virgo A financial investment can be made if you do your due diligence. Don't take someone else's word; do your fact-checking and then make choices.

Libra If you push a little harder, you will get what you want. If you wait for someone else to do the work for you, few rewards will come your way.

Scorpio Share your concerns and ideas. Don't argue with someone who won't listen or take good advice. Concentrate on those willing to work with you, not against you.

Sagittarius Don't join in if someone pressures you to do something excessive. A cautious approach will spare you the trouble that will unfold if you are a follower instead of a leader.

Capricorn Now is a good time to secure your position personally or professionally. Look over your papers, finances and state of mind, and make adjustments that will ease your stress.

Aquarius Put your energy into something worthwhile. Don't make a snap decision if you feel uncertain or a risk is involved. Focus on what's doable. Moderation is best interest.

Pisces You'll need to make an adjustment if you want to avoid a loss. Go over your financial papers to find a way to cut corners. A partnership needs to be reassessed. EUGENIA LAST

THINGS TO DO

Martin Lawrence wants Philly to get 'LIT'

The "Bad Boy" actor and stand-up comic legend hits the Liacouras Center this Saturday.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

Lawrence hits the stage with "LIT AF" this Saturday. GETTY

Martin Lawrence is a legend. The rarely-on-tour comedian is now out with his "LIT AF" tour, which comes to Philly Saturday, Sept. 22 at the Liacouras Center. I chatted with Lawrence about his new tour.

What's changing now about your comic outlook?
Getting back out on the road has to do with a lot of things. Inspiration, material, timing and, of course, if I have something to say. This go-round is a bit different because I am back to my roots of what gave me my start in the stand-up biz: hosting. I am out there now with a group of talented comedians with whom I'll share the stage — comedians who make me laugh and who are all doing great things on their own. So when we all get together, it'll be like a party. The show isn't a traditional Martin Lawrence show where it's just all me doing stand-up. It's all of us out there, giving you our best.

You go away for quite a while between tours. Is it about recharging?
It's all of that, and life in general. Being able to do what I do, I am truly blessed. For that alone, I am grateful. I am also a father, so spending time with my family is the No. 1 priority for me. Spending time with my girls, that's what I am doing when you don't see me. I am a family man at the core of it all.

You were the first-ever host of "Def Comedy Jam." What did you bring to that show?
That was a special moment in time when the stars aligned and we were able to get the people something that was missing. It was one of the most fun times — and to see the doors opened, it was truly a gift. We just had the Def Jam 25th anniversary special on Netflix. To be part of and witness all that love in the room was incredible.

Why do you believe that show lives on so deeply within the hip-hop community and black culturalism?
When you set out to do a project you just hope it works. You hope you are funny and that people like it. To know that it still touches on people, or that people are inspired by it, blows me away. Often people tell me about shout-outs or I hear them and I am truly touched since I am a fan of those people, too. At the time, the community didn't have anything like it and to open doors for others to come has been truly incredible.

What wouldn't you hit on in your life?
All the comedians offer something different. I can't speak to their experiences or what is taboo for them, but for me, I speak about what's going on in life.

Where is TV going for young black comedians?
We have a lot of shows now that are great, and that is good. Like anything, there could always be more. Good TV is good TV. And, I am always open to exploring anything that could be right for me.

What do you think an audience wants from you?
They just want to laugh. Life can present you challenges and is hard. If I can give someone one hour to just check out, enjoy themselves, laugh a little and leave happy, I've done my job.

There's a storm brewing in Philly

One-time "Daily Show" correspondent Hasan Minhaj's stand-up hits the stage.

A.D. AMOROSI
letters@metro.us

If any young comic has had a fascinating trajectory, it's Hasan Minhaj. He brings his "Before the Storm" tour to the Merriam Theatre Sunday, Sept. 23. We caught up with him to chat ahead of his trip to Philly.

Did you have a road map for your "Patriot Act" special [premiering Oct. 28 on Netflix]?
Absolutely. We independently produced a proof of concept, which showed what an episode of "Patriot Act" would be like before we met with Netflix. So we knew exactly what we wanted the show to be. It was important because we wanted them to understand our vision from the get-go. We're lucky because Netflix is super supportive of creators, so it's been great to work with them.

What lessons did you learn from Trevor Noah and Jon Stewart?
They're both such smart, funny guys. I learned so much about what it means to be funny and what it takes to be a leader, from both of them. They're also great friends.

Do you recall why Jon wanted you on that team?

Hasan Minhaj comes to Philly with his new tour. ERIC HOBBS

Jon was passionate about bringing diverse voices to the show and about lifting up younger comics. He and I clicked during my audition, and I think he knew we'd work well together. In my audition, I actually made fun of his movie "Rosewater," and he started cracking up. When that happened, I knew the show was going to be a blast.

What do you miss about "The Daily Show?"
The people. I worked there for four years. It's bittersweet to leave. "The Daily Show" is a special place. We had fun together at the Emmys the other night as a last hurrah, and I truly look forward to keeping in touch with them in the future.

What were your comic inspirations?
Chris Rock had a huge influence on me. Seeing his specials is what made me want to do comedy. "The Daily Show," obviously, also made a tremendous impact. Watching it in college made me realize you could combine comedy with intellectualism, and I thought that was incredibly cool, especially because I was a political science major. He was able to be very funny about important topics I was interested in.

How do you think "Patriot Act" will approach modern culture?
The strength of the show is that we have the time and space to explore topics in depth. We cannot react quickly to something the way "The Daily Show" can, but we can investigate and research political and cultural trends on a very sophisticated level. As a host, I think I'll have a fresh perspective on this style of comedy, as a Muslim and a first-generation American. Diversity is lacking in the late-night space so far. The benefit of the Netflix platform is that it has such a vast global reach, so we are also hoping to have a really international audience. Not just American issues, but world issues.

Dan Fogelman wants 'Life Itself' to remind people how beautiful the world is

The writer and director insists the comedy-drama doesn't sugarcoat it, though.

GREGORY WAKEMAN
Gregory.Wakeman@metro.us

Dan Fogelman has been building toward "Life Itself" for around a decade.

Having cut his teeth as a screenwriter on the undeniably enjoyable family friendly-fare "Cars," "Bolt" and "Tangled," Fogelman moved into more dramatic and weighty, but still always funny, territory with "Crazy, Stupid, Love," "Danny Collins" and, most successfully, his hit show "This Is Us."

"Life Itself" takes the themes and tones of Fogelman's recent output and intensifies them. Set over various generations of people in New York and Spain, it merges the stories of Oscar Isaac, Olivia Wilde and Annette Bening with those of Laia Costa, Sergio Peris-Mencheta, Antonio Banderas and Alex Mooner and then, for good measure, those of Olivia Cooke, Mandy Patinkin, and Jean Smart.

"I was trying to make something unusual and different but still tonally lived in a space that I like and that is familiar to me," Fogelman tells Metro. "My belief is that oftentimes when we go to the movie theaters nowadays, or we go even to watch a television show, we expect it to be one certain thing.

"We call it an R-rated comedy, a heavy Oscar drama or a horror movie. I find that life is often a lot of things at once and from day to day," he adds. "I recently lost one of my best friends very early. It was one of the saddest days of my life. But it was also a day that was filled with joy and laughter and celebration."

But while Fogelman is intent on taking his audiences on an emotional journey, there is one rule he strictly adheres to.

"I have never wanted to make anything that made people feel worse than when they came in," he says. "With this film, as I was writing and making it, the world — and our country, specifically — is in a very weird and difficult place. We are very divided."

Fogelman adds. "It is important to be reminded that despite all of the ugliness, tragedy, and all of the personal and interpersonal stuff that plagues us and affects us on a daily basis, if you take one step back you can see that there is real beauty and love and optimism in the human experience."

"Life Itself" is now in theaters.

Eagles quarterback Carson Wentz is finally back after recovering from an ACL and LCL injury. GETTY IMAGES

Colts vs. Eagles: 3 things to watch for Philly is looking to get back into the win column.

JOVAN ALFORD
jovan.alford@metro.us

After losing to the Tampa Bay Buccaneers on the road last week, the Eagles are back at the friendly confines of Lincoln Financial Field to take on the Indianapolis Colts.

Things should improve drastically this week for the defending Super Bowl champs as quarterback Carson Wentz is back under center.

How will Wentz do against an aggressive Colts defense? And can the defense redeem itself against quarterback Andrew Luck and first-year head coach Frank Reich?

Here are three things to watch out for in this Week 3 matchup.

1. CARSON WENTZ'S DEBUT

It has been nine months since starting quarterback Carson Wentz last played in a meaningful football game. Wentz suffered a significant knee injury, tearing both his ACL and LCL last season, trying to make a play with his legs inside the red zone against the Los Angeles Rams.

Fast-forward to mid-to-late September and Wentz will be back under center on Sunday. Against the Colts and for the next few games, do not expect Wentz to be firing on all cylinders like he was doing last season.

This will be his first real game action after he only participated in 11-on-11 drills in the summer and working out before preseason and regular season games. Wentz also does not have his top wide receiver in Jeffery yet, so he will be leaning on tight ends Zach Ertz, Dallas Goedert and wide receivers Nelson Agholor and Jordan Matthews to make plays.

Eagles head coach Doug Pederson and the rest of the coaching staff will do a great job working Wentz into the game and allowing him to play without any limits.

2. MORE TOUCHES FOR COREY CLEMENT

While there has been a lot of attention on the Eagles' injured wide receivers, the running back position is not in great shape either.

In last week's game against Tampa Bay, the Eagles were already without veteran Darren Sproles, which meant a lot of touches for Corey Clement. But things got worse as Jay Ajayi went down with an injury in the first quarter.

Ajayi eventually returned in the second half, but for most of the game, it was the Clement and Wendell Smallwood show. Clement gave the offense solid production with 85 total yards (30 rushing yards) and a touchdown, but Smallwood struggled.

He only had 28 rushing yards on seven carries and a fumble. In total, the Eagles only had 91 rushing yards as a team, which was not good enough to win.

Therefore, the running game must get on track on Sunday to help out Wentz and the passing game. It will not be easy, however, as the team will mostly be without Ajayi and Sproles.

This means that it will be a running back by committee against a Colts defense that held Washington to 65 rushing yards last week. The Eagles will be leaning on Clement once again to be their multipurpose back, and hoping undrafted free agent Josh Adams can give them a jolt in the backfield.

3. COLTS LB DARIUS LEONARD

On paper, the Colts defense does not look challenging in comparison to both the Falcons and Buccaneers, but they still have playmakers to keep an eye out for.

Through the first two games, the Indianapolis defense has only given up 83 rushing yards per game, which is good for ninth in the NFL. One reason why they have been successful in stopping the run is the play of rookie linebacker Darius Leonard.

The second-round pick out of South Carolina State is a fast, tackling machine that the Eagles' offense will have to account for. Leonard had 18 tackles, a forced fumble and a sack against Washington last Sunday.

He also leads the NFL in tackles with 28 and won AFC Defensive Player of the Week for his performance.
